

Threat Assessment + Management Services

Identify and monitor open source intelligence on individuals with malicious intent who may pose a threat of violence.

Threat Assessment and Management Services

When a threat of violence first surfaces – to you or your family, your employees or clients or others – three threat assessment priorities become urgent and critical. The first is determining whether the individual poses a threat of violence. The second is assessing the person’s potential for violence. And the third is employing best practices to increase security and actively manage the threat by integrating and coordinating critical involvement by multiple parties.

Why Jensen Hughes?

Our Threat + Violence Risk Management team of experts helps you identify potential threats and risks of violence. We specialize in threat assessment and behavioral case management for companies across all industries, as well as U.S. federal agencies, other government employers and non-profit organizations. Put simply; we help identify risks and red flags early to gain a greater chance to intervene before violence occurs.

About Jensen Hughes

Jensen Hughes is the global leader in engineering, consulting and technology that make our world safe, secure and resilient.

Our security consultants, investigators, engineers and scientists work as one team to address the complexities of safety and security to help our clients protect what matters. Mitigating the factors that could put lives, property and reputations at risk has been our objective for over 80 years.

What You Can Expect

- + Higher probability that an act of violence will be prevented.
- + Accelerated progress across coordinated actions – from assessing the threat and improving security to documenting events and briefing authorities.
- + Avoidance of potential negative outcomes when a simplistic, law enforcement-only approach is taken.
- + Broader success – beyond prevention of harm – across goals such as lowering the risk of lawsuit or settlement and getting appropriate mental health care for a subject.

Scope of Services

Assessment of a Specific Threat

Technical, methodology-driven pre-attack pathway analysis to identify behaviors and characteristics likely to foreshadow an act of targeted violence. Includes background examination; review and analysis, if relevant, by a clinical psychologist; liaison and facilitation with law enforcement and protective intelligence authorities; and counter-threat recommendations and assistance. Professional collection of information on a subject's mental history, if available; current life situation; behavioral history; motivation; attack-related behavior; facilitating and mitigating factors; criminal history; media records; corporate interest and affiliation; specialized training and their ownership or ability to acquire weapons. Includes interviews of associates, neighbors, family members and others with a direct perspective on the events occurring in the subject's life.

Monitoring and Surveillance

Ongoing monitoring of the subject's activities, communications and behaviors directly through surveillance, open source intelligence and threat monitoring or through liaison with all parties likely to have information about the individual.

Threat Assessment Program Development

Guidance, support and training in creating in-house, multi-disciplinary behavioral threat assessment teams composed of representatives from management, HR, legal and security, as well as external specialists in law enforcement, mental health and targeted violence prevention.

Automated Open-Source Threat Detection and Analysis

Continuous use of the most advanced real-time, open-source data search, open source intelligence and threat monitoring insight and mining enterprise technology to find, select, acquire and analyze actionable security intelligence on direct or indirect threats to a company's leaders, employees, assets, operations or reputation.

Expert Testimony and Litigation Support

Direct and indirect support to counsel on civil and criminal matters involving threat-related incidents, including investigative services and expert testimony in court.
